DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 1-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. It is unclear as to how the word flux further narrows the scope of layer.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1, 2, 4-6, 8-12 and 14-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Takano.

Takano (Fig 1a, 2a) discloses a flip chip package having a bonded anisotropic conductive film, comprising a thermal set plastic material (3a) and a plurality of conductive particles within the plastic material, wherein each conductive particle has a conductive that is a band in a ball shape or bubble and therefore is a gold bead (7C; English Par. 0031), a bonding layer (7b) forming a spherical structure and a flux layer (7a; understood to be an electrically insulating layer; Applicants Spec. Page 7), the bonding layer lays over a surface of the conductive bead and thus covers said bead, and the flux layer lays over a surface of the binding layer and thus covers said bonding layer; and chip (1) and carrier (6) with a plurality of contact points (2 & 5) that correspond in position to first contact points of said chip, wherein the ACF is inherently inserted (Fig 1a) between the chip and carrier, such that each pair of corresponding contact points form a common metallic bond through the bonding layer of the conductive particles within the ACF (Fig 1b).

Although, Takano does not appear to explicitly teach the process limitations of "Hardened after being raised to a first temperature, the bonding layer melts at a second temperature higher than the first temperature" the product of Takano inherently possesses the structural characteristics imparted by the process limitation. See In re Fitzgerald, Sanders, and Bagheri, 205 USPQ 594 (CCPA 1980).

While Takano does not appear to disclose that the chip is comprised of silicon. Examiner takes official notice that silicon chips were well known at the time the invention was made and that it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to form the chip of Takano of silicon in order form a semiconductor chip as requires by Takano.
